

Media Coverage of the Kroc Institute's Report on the Status of Peace Accord Implementation on the One-Year Anniversary of the Signing of the Final Agreement

December 6, 2017

The Kroc Institute's Barometer project received widespread media coverage in Colombia and internationally for the presentation of its first official report on the status of implementation of the Colombia peace accord. The report was released at a press breakfast in Bogota on November 16, just ahead of the one-year anniversary of the signing of the accord and the beginning of the implementation process.

Summary of coverage

Between November 16th and December 4th, the Kroc Institute was mentioned 106 times in Colombian and international media, for an average of more than 5 press hits a day over the past three weeks. Some stories quoted the Kroc report and used its figures but did not mention the Institute by name, while others mentioned Kroc directly.

Prominent coverage and in-depth analyses appeared in major Colombian media, including El Tiempo, El Espectador, Semana, Noticias Uno and Verdad Abierta, as detailed below. The estimated readership and viewership of mentions of the Kroc Institute in these media outlets of Colombia is 12 million people.

Many of the press hits came from references to the Kroc Institute by President Juan Manuel Santos during his speech on the anniversary of the peace accord signing. The President mentioned Kroc three times and directly used a phrase from the executive summary of the Institute's report, saying that while some assessments of the implementation process tend to show the glass half-empty, a comparative analysis shows "as the Kroc Institute says, a glass half-full." Santos used the same phrase in his Twitter messages that day. That phrase was also picked up and used by FARC leader Rodrigo Londoño after a meeting with the President. This suggests not only presence in the media but influence with the main political actors. References about the glass half-full were all over the media during those days.

Examples of prominent coverage

Below are descriptions of the main Spanish-language press hits in Colombia:

El Tiempo: The most important and widely read Colombian newspaper. The editor mentioned the Kroc Institute and some of the most important data of the report for an in-depth article in a five-page special about the first anniversary of the peace accords. The article was published in the print version on Sunday

November 19th and can be read in its online version here:

<http://www.eltiempo.com/politica/proceso-de-paz/efectos-en-colombia-tras-un-ano-de-la-firma-del-acuerdo-de-paz-con-las-farc-152740>

- Estimated readership: 2.3 million readers for Sunday print edition and 250,000 online readers per day.
- Almost 10 million followers in Facebook and Twitter.

El Espectador: The second most important news magazine in Colombia, especially for opinion articles and news analysis. It provided a detailed analysis of the report and presented infographics with some of its data:

<https://www.elespectador.com/noticias/paz/una-implementacion-que-avanza-media-marcha-articulo-723543>

- Estimated readership: One million online readers (it has only one print version per week).
- Almost eight million followers in Facebook and Twitter.

Revista Semana: The most important news magazine in Colombia, with strong influence among decision makers and political leaders. It was the first news outlet to publish an in-depth analysis of the Kroc report:

<http://www.semana.com/nacion/articulo/acuerdo-de-paz-informe-instituto-kroc-de-la-universidad-de-notre-dame/547368>

- Estimated readership: 500,000 readers online and one and a half million in the print version.
- Almost seven million followers in Facebook and Twitter.

Semana's influential opinion columnist María Jimena Duzán wrote an article mentioning the Kroc Institute report and urging the government to pay attention to its recommendations: <http://www.semana.com/opinion/articulo/resultado-del-proceso-de-paz-en-un-ano-de-implementacion/548544>

- Estimated readership: One million readers online per week.
- Followers of Duzán on Twitter: 722,000

Duzán also directs the most important television discussion show in Colombia, Semana en Vivo, which interviewed Barometer program director Borja Paladini about the Kroc Institute report. The program can be seen here:
